

A complete series of timeless tableware

Rheolog tableware series is now complete with new, timeless additions. Oil and vinegar bottles and spice mills have been designed to pair beautifully with the current selection of glasses, carafes, bowls, dishes and other items in this series, designed by JüngerKühn for Bolia.

Rheolog is a collection of high-quality tableware with an elegant design. Made of high-quality glass and stainless steel, their organic shapes are brought to life in a timeless expression that transcends passing trends. The Rheolog pieces stand out for their clever fusion of classic and modern design language.

The Rheolog collection, which until now consisted of glasses and carafes, has been complemented by oil and vinegar bottles, as well as spice mills. The bottles, with their soft rubber lids, are designed to serve vinaigrettes and oils, while adding a decorative element to the table. The mills are designed to serve freshly grinded salt, pepper, and other spice mixes, equipped with a CrushGrind® ceramic mechanism that makes them particularly durable and sturdy.

The stainless steel of the carafe creates a harmonious contrast with its soft, organic shapes, complementing the mouth-blown glasses and their simple form, with slightly rounded rims.

This series will add a distinctive touch to any special occasion.
