

Bolia Design Awards 2023

Bolia Design Awards 2023 is now open for entries

Designers from around the world are now invited to submit their proposals to the jury of the Bolia Design Awards 2023. As in previous years, three awards will be given to the most creative, bold and sustainable projects in line with the brand's vision of New Scandinavian Design. The participants have until May 1, 2023 to submit up to three design proposals.

Since 2007, the Design Awards are a way for Bolia to pay tribute to both upcoming and established talents from around the world by focusing on their creative vision and sustainable approach to the design process. This institution not only supports and provides opportunities for the most daring designers, but also helps to see things in a new perspective, to find new ways and create changes for a better future.

The Zen rug series by Emily Broom, the Cocoon coat stand by Benditas Studio, the Bronco vase by Fabio Vogel and the Latch coffee table by Dazingfeelsgood are all pieces that came to life at Bolia Design Awards. These designs are now part of the collection and the Bolia universe. In the 2022 edition, Ségolène Pla-Busiris received the Jury Prize for the Fragment side table, Sara Ullvetter Norman the People's Choice Prize for the Dune chair, and the duo Fischer & Mordrelle the Circularity Prize for the Moon stool.

This year again, creativity and sustainability will be in the spotlight. The professional jury, which will be announced shortly, wants to be moved. Members expect new classics, future creative icons, and proposals that combine aesthetics and functionality for an inspiring and improved daily life. Natural and sustainable materials, as well as craftsmanship and attention to detail, are particularly sought after.

The first prize consists of €7,000. For the People's Choice Prize, worth €3,500, the jury will select eight finalists who will be chosen by the public on the Bolia website. Finally, the Circularity Prize, worth the same amount as the People's Choice Prize, will reward a design that stands out for its circular and sustainable approach.

Participants have until May 1st to submit up to three different designs. Projects should be submitted in the form of drawings, sketches, renderings or 3D models (or something completely different), along with a text explaining the genesis of their idea, the thoughts behind their design(s) and the choice of materials.

The three winners will be revealed in June, and all finalists will be presented in the new Bolia showroom at Holmen, Copenhagen, during 3daysofdesign.
