

Acorn Lamps: Shapes, colours and materials come together to express nature

The Acorn lamps symbolise the oak tree with poetry. Their shape is inspired by an acorn, from which they take their name. They are made of oak wood and, in line with Bolia's values, are as durable and solid as the tree. A creation by the Danish design studio 365° North for the new SS22 Bolia Collection.

The Acorn series includes pendant and table lamps of different diameters. Their appealing organic silhouette is inspired by the shape of an acorn, from which they take their name. This shape echoes the FSC®-certified (FSC® C165134) solid oak of which they are made, and the piece as a whole reflects the deep natural inspiration that distinguishes the new Bolia spring collection.

Spring is finally here, with its refreshing colours, its blossoms and its long-awaited light. The new Bolia Spring Collection offers a light and sensual design universe, which clearly refers to Scandinavian nature and its optimistic spring season filled with cheerful perspectives. This new collection, a true invitation from nature, provides the framework for a peaceful anchoring in simple things, such as this series of elegant lamps.

Their white opal glass unfolds a voluptuous light, which brings serenity to all types of spaces, in a living room or on a bedside table. The cord is elegantly integrated into the design, while the material contrast of opal glass and oiled oak makes the lamps equally as appealing on and off.

"We believe that design should make sense. Shape, colour and choice of materials must add up and make sense for each design object. Great design is functional, beautiful and simple to understand," concludes the studio 365° North.
