Coffee tables: the perfect balance of form and function by BOLIA

At the heart of the home, the coffee table is far more than a functional object. It becomes a meeting point – a place where everyday objects and moments coexist. True to its New Scandinavian Design philosophy, BOLIA creates designs in which aesthetics, durability and tactility intertwine to shape harmonious and inspiring interiors.

With Eida and Latch, the Danish design brand presents two complementary interpretations of the coffee table: one sculptural and mineral, the other functional and versatile. These are two approaches to design that respond to contemporary needs while standing the test of time.

Designed by Martin Lauritsen, the Eida coffee table is defined by a calm, organic expression. Sculpted from noble materials such as marble or travertine, each piece reveals unique veining, making every table one of a kind. Its clean lines and carefully balanced proportions create an almost architectural presence, while maintaining a light and refined expression. Created to adapt to a variety of spaces, the Eida series is available in different sizes, materials and heights, encouraging dynamic and personalised compositions. Indoors as well as outdoors, it accompanies both shared moments and quiet contemplation, becoming a central element of the living environment.

Alongside it, the Latch coffee table explores a more functional approach to design, without ever compromising on aesthetics. Featuring a removable tray and a clever structure, it adapts seamlessly to everyday uses: side table, serving tray or centrepiece. This flexibility reflects a design philosophy that evolves with modern lifestyles. Minimalist in its expression, Latch stands out through the precision of its details and the quality of its materials. Its intuitive and versatile design makes it easy to integrate into any interior, subtly transforming the space while meeting practical needs.

Together, Eida and Latch perfectly illustrate BOLIA's philosophy: creating pieces that combine beauty and functionality, while highlighting durable materials and refined craftsmanship. Each design is made to last, evolve and be passed on, embracing a responsible approach to design.

Available online and in stores, the Eida and Latch coffee tables are part of a collection designed to invite you to slow down and open up – creating spaces that evolve with the rhythm of life.
